Gender Differences in Perceptions of Organizational Cultures in the Banking Industry in Taiwan.

By Chih-Chien Chen; Fosh, Fabiola; Foster, Deborah. Journal of Industrial Relations. Feb 2008, Vol. 50 Issue 1, p39-156.

This article examines differences in perceptions of organizational cultures found in a survey of male and female managers in three types of banks in Taiwan. Instead of a consistent pattern of differences between male and female managers' perceptions across these three bank types, we found that each bank type was characterized by a distinct pattern of gender differences that was related to the ownership, history and type of business of that bank type. Important in explaining differences in perceptions of organizational cultures were the extent of organizational socialization and the adoption of various human resource practices, including team-working and targeted recruitment and selection, and the respondents' age and education. [ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR] DOI: 10.1111/j.1468-596X.2008.005509.x. (AN: 51789277)

Subjects: BANKING Industry; CORPORATE culture; TEAMS in the workplace; WOMEN executives; PERSONNEL management; TAIWAN; Other Depository Credit Intermediation; Savings Institutions; Personal and commercial banking industry; Commercial Banking; Human Resources Consulting Services; Administration of Human Resource Programs (except Education, Public Health, and Veterans Affairs Programs); GENDER; SEX differences (Biology); PATRIARCHY; TAIWAN -- Economic conditions.

1: Gender Differences in Perceptions of Organizational Cultures in the Banking Industry in Taiwan.
By Chih-Chuan Chan, Fossey, Deborah Journal of Industrial Relations Volume 56, Issue 1, pp 39-56, 2005. Abstract This article examines differences in perceptions of organizational cultures found in a survey of male and female managers across three types of banks in Taiwan. Instead of a consistent pattern of differences between male and female managers’ perceptions across the three bank types, we found that each bank type was characterized by a distinct pattern of gender differences that was related to the ownership, history and type of effectiveness of the bank type. Important in explaining differences in perceptions of organizational cultures were the extent of organizational socialization and the adoption of various human resource practices. Including team working and targeted recruitment and selection, and the respondents’ age and education. (ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR) DOI: 10.1177/0021936005056004. (AM: 3179037)
